GUARD THE PRESIDENT FROM MAD ANARCHIST

TECH STUDENT, NEPHEW OF FORMER U. S. SENATOR MORRILL, ARRESTED ON THEFT CHARGE, CONFESSES—MAY LEAD TO DISCOVERY OF LOOT GANG.

By the arrest to-day of Raleigh D. Morrill of Stratford, Conn., Tech student and nephew of the late United States Senator Justin S. Morrill, New Haven railroad detectives declare that a wholesale conspiracy to steal baggage has been nipped in the bud.

During the summer the New Haven road has been compelled to settle claims for lost baggage to the amount of $20,000. This baggage was never accounted for.

Young Morrill was arrested at the South Station when he returned from a short vacation on the charge of stealing a trunk and a bag. Chief of Detectives Valley of the New Haven Detective force, William Bourke and Inspector Oliver W. of the Boston police, who had been following him, took the youth into custody when he left himself.

Guards the President from Mad Anarchist
LUNATIC, WHO ESCAPED FROM BAY STATE ASYLUM, THREATENED TO KILL HIM.

By Boston American Leaded Wire.
NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—There was great excitement in Long Island City where the President and his family arrived there from Oyster Bay on the way to Washington today, because of a warning sent from the police and secret service officials from Massachusetts that Matt Paul Zerk, a lunatic with a lost for the murder of King and president, had escaped from a State lunatic asylum and had announced his intention of going to Oyster Bay to assassinate President Roosevelt.

Every person around the depot at Long Island City was closely scanned by the police and secret service men, and the crowd were kept far back from the platform where the President had to wait for the ferryboat across the water to the city. The warning that was sent from the State lunatic asylum was printed on slips of paper and was as follows:

A Pronounced Anarchist.
—Matt Paul Zerk, a Hollander, thirty years of age, 5 feet 8 inches, 150 pounds, well built, dark brown eyes, light brown hair, light brown mustache, hair cut close, a large mouth, light hair, thick lips, hairy slightly in left leg, tall face and body, has plenty of hair and some culture, escaped Sept. 21, 1905, from the State lunatic asylum in Massachusetts. Is an insane murderer and pronounced anarchist.

Girl Slayer's Trail Leads to Rome's Swirl
NEWSBOY'S STORY REVEALS MOVEMENTS OF MAN WITH SUIT CASES.

From the door of a pawnshop in Place Vendôme the police have traced the purchase of the suit case in which the body of a girl was found in the Westchester house into the French street with two suit cases. This witness showed the Atlantic Avenue "L" road, to Rome's whirl, which leads to Windsor. Of this man previous to the purchase of the fatal suit case, from Rome's whirl, there appears no trace.

The important development to-day in the baffling mystery was the story of the person who saw him after he left the Joseph Berkman pawnshop in Pleasant street with two suit cases. This witness showed that the man did enter the police station, indicating that the suit case was not the body of the girl.

When Burke, a pawnshop owner in Place Vendôme, was asked to show the suit case, he said he had never seen it. He said he had seen the man who had been seen at the Joseph Berkman pawnshop in Pleasant street with two suit cases. This witness showed that the man did enter the police station, indicating that the suit case was not the body of the girl.

MOTIVE IS A MYSTERY NO GERMAN DESIGNER

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—William H. Travers, millionaire banker and journalist, has today taken his own life, leaving behind him a fortune of $2,000,000.

After tipping his valet $20, and joking with his servants he went to the room, put the muzzle of a revolver in his mouth and pulled the trigger. He had been dead for some time when a maid found his body.

The middle is one of the most sensational that has ever started local circles, not only because of the prominence of the victim, but also because of the highly dramatic manner in which he accomplished his purpose, and the mystery in which the details leading up to it are shrouded.

Joked and Laughed With Servants.
Arising in excellent spirits at his usual time, Mr. Travers joked and laughed with his servants for half an hour after he had taken his breakfast. He then went to his study, where he was writing a letter to his wife, and told her that he would be home in a few days.

That was the last seen of Mr. Travers in life. He was not seen again until his body was found in his study. The cause of his death is a mystery, and the motive is a mystery.

Was Divorced Last Spring.
Mr. Travers was married in 1880, and during the last few years had been the subject of discussion more than any other man in the city. He was a member of the New York Club, and was known to all who were in the city.

Most of the school teams look pretty good for so early in the season.

Today will be the real beginning for many of the schools, as many begin the actual campaign on that date.

Boston High will play at Leominster on Thanksgiving Day this year, as has former years, but a game has been arranged with South Boston High at Leominster.

East Boston High and West Boston High will not have teams on the gridiron this season.

Dorchester High is showing an intention to add a second game with East Boston High, which is their only opponent.

GENERALS WIN MAIN A FIGHT, SAYS NELSON

In this the fourth article of a series of five written by Battling Nelson for the BOSTON AMERICAN on "How to Become a Fighter," he takes up and discusses RING GENERALSHIP. This all important aspect

By Battling Nelson

A good ring general is one who has had much experience in the ring. There are men who can fight twenty five years with out being good ring general. In fact, the better the fighter, the more likely he is to be a poor general.

I would call a good ring general a boxer who knows when he is winning, when he is losing, and uses his head to help him out of pugilism is itself upon a series of five articles that cannot fail to impress. Coming from the pen of the author, every sentence valuable weight.

When Jim met Jeff, he was a good fighter, but he was not a good general. When I fought him at Philadelphia some months ago he was a very tired boy, the last few rounds. I had him using all his strength in keeping things, but he faded out at that.

In clinches when he is tired as he can be, he will work away with his shoulders and arms, giving those at the ringside the impression that he is beating his man in death. He is strong, fast, and crowd favorite. The other fellow knows that the crowd is behind him, but he is not. He is not in the audience the sports think that he is. He is not in the audience the sports think that he is. He is not in the audience the sports think that he is.

Today Abe Attell is probably the greatest ring general in the world. He is past the sort of fighter. When Jim met Jeff, he was a good fighter, but he was not a good general. When I fought him at Philadelphia some months ago he was a very tired boy, the last few rounds. I had him using all his strength in keeping things, but he faded out at that.

When Jeff ran Jim stopped and looked him in the face. He did not know what to do. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general.

He did not know what to do. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general.

He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general.

He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general.

He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general. He was not a good general.

The Right Time for a Bachelor to Marry

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

FROM the eastern slope of the faraway Nevada Mountains there comes to me the following letter, with its somewhat perplexing appeal, from a puffed bachelor:

Dear Sir—I infer from the tone of your writings in the AMERICAN that you believe in marriage. So do I. I am a bachelor of thirty-five and have been looking for a mate for several years, but so far have failed to find one.

I am often called an "old maid," and I suppose I am, for as far as habits go, having never used tobacco or stimulants or profane language or gambled.

I have a beautiful home and plenty of money with which to support a wife, but I don't seem to be able to find one that I can love, though I have made a number of attempts to marry me.

I have almost felt that marriage was a holy ordinance and that those should be chosen for the contracting parties. And that is what sticks me.

Now, sir, here is my question: Would it be right for me to pick out a nice woman and marry her without loving her? Is it right to marry without love?

I trust that you will try to give me through the AMERICAN a candid and sincere answer to this, to me, very important question.

I would say to you, my dear sir, that you would never have within you the making of a splendid husband. The very fact that you have an ideal as regards marriage, and some romantic notions in the matter without, proves that you are head and shoulders above many men that I know of. Occasionally men marry without once thinking of the questions over which you are scrupling. They marry for "convenience," or for "social standing," or for money, or for anything else except love.

Now, sir, in regard to your inquiry: Is it right to marry without love? No, sir, not if you are really and positively "old."

If there is a wrong thing in this world, an infinitely wrong thing, it is the foolish marriage. I can conceive of nothing that shall be half so monstrous and revolting!

By no means, my good sir, would I advise you to marry the woman you did not love.

But you must bear in mind the fact that, at the age of thirty-five, love is not quite what it is at eighteen or twenty. At thirty-five "Love's Young Dream" is not so "young" as it was at the earlier date. The "dream" has become more of a "reality," and one is prepared, in part at least, to see things as they are.

It is not, therefore, possible that, while you cannot love a woman with the love of the youth of twenty, you can yet love her with the love of the man of thirty-five.

Do not permit yourself to become discouraged. You are too good a man to live and die an old bachelor. As I have already intimated, you are quite capable of being one of the best and noblest of husbands.

Keep your courage up; give your pretty home a fresh coat of paint; keep the lawn in good trim; watch out for your bank account—and as sure as you live the woman you are looking for will sooner or later be found.

"CONVICT 99" A PRISONER FOR LOVE The Story of an Irish-American Persecuted in English Prisons

Synopsis

LAURENCE CRAIG, once a poor English mill hand, but now the trained professional robber of Christened Lanes, the rich London neighborhood, had beautiful qualities of his own on the night of the fall of Francis Court. A typical young Irish-American, whose luck and prowess carried him to the front, he was a man who might also be called a hero.

The next evening, when he called to learn his fate, he read the verdict in his own case. He was sentenced to the penitentiary for life. With the morning of Mr. Court's fall, he was in the first of the long prison cell. He was not alone, but he was not with Court, that would have been the better fate. He was in a cell with a man named "Laurance," who had been sentenced to the same term. He was not alone, but he was not with Court, that would have been the better fate.

HOW TO TAKE PROPER CARE OF NEW GLOVES

WHEN buying gloves choose of a soft yielding and elastic substance, and being exceptionally cheap. Dressed silk retains its freshness longer than made and black gloves are usually less pliable than white and colored ones. Do not buy too small a glove and avoid those with short fingers. It is necessary to keep a pair of gloves clean and free from dirt and leaving the thumb hole till all the fingers are fully in place, then insert the

The Literary Sensation of the Century

Here Is What the Great Bishop of London, Preaching in Westminster Abbey, Said:

"Every one of you should read that remarkable work of fiction, entitled 'WHEN IT WAS DARK.' It paints in wonderful colors what, it seems to me, the world would be if for six months, as in the story is supposed to be the case, the Resurrection might be supposed never to have occurred; and as you feel the darkness creeping round the world you see how human in a moment loses the best friend she ever had, and craves for light and violence in every part of the world—when you see how darkness settles down upon the human spirit, when it sat for six months and regarded the Christian record as a fable, then you quit with something like adequate thanksgiving, and thank God it is light because of the awful darkness when it was dark."

The literary sensation of the century will begin serially in SUNDAY'S BOSTON AMERICAN. Don't fail to read the initial installment.

All England, and already all of literary America, is talking about this great book. Here is what some of the thinking men of this century say about it:

REV. JOHN MERIBERT DRIVER, Pastor of the People's Church, New York City:

"After all it is said, 'When It Was Dark' the story of a great conspiracy, in a great book, a genuinely great book, and I believe its publication in serial form by the BOSTON AMERICAN and its circulation among the people will result in great good. Should the book be widely read, as it probably will be, it will give great offense in certain circles, and there will undoubtedly be heated, indignant rejoinders, all of which will be very illuminating and by no means unprofitable."

THE REV. BISHOP SAMUEL PALLOWS of Chicago:

"I do not wonder at all that the Bishop of London advised his hearers to get the book and read it. I would certainly advise his admonition and earnest advice the clergy and laity to read this epoch-making book. Its publication by the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN can only result in great good to those who take advantage of this opportunity thus afforded them to read it."

"She threw off her long cloak and sank into a chair. The sticky grease paint of theatre had hardly been removed. She looked, as she said, 'worn out.'"

AS IT WAS

As it was, James Street, once a successful man, now a laborer, is depicted in a state of despair. The illustration shows him in a dark, possibly industrial or urban setting, looking down with a somber expression. The style is reminiscent of early 20th-century magazine illustrations.

After a long time, the man who had been abandoned by his wife and children, James Street, was found. He was a man of about 40 years of age, with a dark complexion and a serious expression. He was wearing a dark suit and a white shirt with a dark tie. He was looking down at the ground with a somber expression.

In many instances the fat which Summer increases on the women of fashion is an almost insurmountable obstacle to their taking absolutely no exercise not positively necessary to her daily existence, and upon her return home from the theatre or elsewhere she is greeted with, "Why, how stout you've grown since you went away," and forthwith turns in dismay to survey herself in her mirror, only to find that the fat, clinging to her

During her husband's she has claimed the right to her own life, in her own hands, in doing in all sorts of sweetmeats, ice-creams and various other fattening foods. She forgets for the time being what result it would have upon her figure. It never occurred to her that her waistline was fast expanding, and that the apple-like curves over her hips were all but gone.

Consequently she had taken on the flesh that had almost spoiled her figure. A glance upwards revealed to her a detested double chin and a tendency toward a thick neck.

A beautiful figure is what the woman of fashion most craves, particularly at this time when fashion decrees that the waist line be slender, the shoulders broad, and the hips as near perfection as possible. In order to show off the "fashionable" figure to be worn this Fall and Winter.

The surest way to become matronly looking is to take on a little too much flesh in the waist and throat, for it quickly robs one of the glowing, youthful appearance which may be held away into middle life, with careful and judicious exercising to keep her weight down, her flesh firm, and muscles hard.

Drink Hot Not Cold Water.
The intelligent and ambitious woman will at once seek about to rectify the mistake she has brought about by her life of lax idleness during her childhood. She will seek out some exercise best suited to her needs, and proceed at once to take it. Instead of drinking so much cold water (which is fattening), she will take it very hot. Upon rising in the morning let her drink a large cupful before dressing; before breakfast and luncheon let her drink two more cupfuls about an hour apart, and again before retiring at night. She must avoid the afternoon slumber, which are one of the surest ways of putting on extra flesh. Let her substitute hot water, with just a dash of salt, for coffee.

Hot water is one of the best and quickest remedies for reducing flesh. It makes the skin clear, the eyes bright, and tones up the general health by flushing out the kidneys and liver, carrying off the sluggish matter. It will also awaken up the breath far more quickly than many a medicine, and do far less harm to the lining of the stomach.

Long walks are considered by everyone to be splendid exercise for reducing the flesh. Many women of fashion cannot find time to dress and go out in the early morning, perhaps they could find time to devote from ten to fifteen minutes to physical exercising in their homes upon rising.

The following exercises for reducing the waist, throat and hips, if practiced faithfully night and morning, cannot fail to bring the patient down to her original normal condition:

Exercise No. 1. Stand erect with heels together, toes two inches apart, shoulders drawn back and downward, chest well raised, back curved at the waist line, hands clasped at the back, chin pointed straight outward and upward, letting the head drop gently backward, using the muscles of the neck and throat as though endeavoring to describe circles with the point of the chin.

Now, while holding the body rigid from the ground up, work the muscles of the throat by stretching them, reaching far up with the point of the chin, describing twenty circles morning and night, increasing two each day until forty has been reached. Pay no attention to a slight stiff feeling in the muscles of the neck, which is caused by bringing into play the muscles that are seldom used, and which will cease the looser, fatty flesh to leave it, and with hands clasped tightly, head high over the head in mid-air. Now, while holding the breath until the head and neck to become firm and hard, as was its normal condition.

Exercise No. 2. Assume same position as described in Exercise No. 1, this time while raising the chin high in the air (the muscles held tight), turn the head to right and left as far as possible in each direction, bringing as possible and return to the original position before expelling every particle of air from the lungs through the nose and mouth while counting six. Inhale as long as possible, as long as the left and increase daily until forty has been reached. The legs under the chin will appear in an astonishingly short time.

Exercise No. 3. Stand erect as described in exercise No. 1, with hands clasped tightly, head high over the head in mid-air. Now, while holding the breath until the head and neck to become firm and hard, as was its normal condition.

Exercise No. 4. Get down on the floor on all fours like an animal, with arms resting flat on the floor, face resting on the hands, which are as close together. Now reach the right leg straight out to the fullest length, upward, as high in the air as possible, and hold it immediately and repeat the exercise five times. After resting a moment assume the same erect position, and this time instead of swinging the body to right and left as possible in each direction, keeping it rigid as above described.

Exercise No. 5. Lie on the floor flat on the back, with arms stretched full length at the sides, palms down. Now inhale through the nose counting seven, and while holding the breath raise the right leg as high in the air as the reach will permit and swing it, cutting a small circle with the pointed toe, making the sweep as large and as high as possible without touching the leg, but holding the muscles tense.

Bring the leg at least twenty times while holding the one long breath, and then drop it gently back on the floor, and rest a moment before trying the exercise with the opposite leg. Increase the number of circles each day until one hundred has been reached with each leg. Then combine the two alternately in a perpetual motion—first the right leg to the highest point, the left one is at the lowest.

This is a heroic exercise, and will reduce the hips visibly in fourteen days.

strength will permit. Now drop it gently back to the floor beside the other one, and after a moment's rest raise the other one, holding it in the same manner.

Exercise No. 6. Lie across the bed, or a strong couch, flat on the back. In this position creep (on the hands only) out across the floor until the line comes directly over the edge of the bed. At this point inhale through the nose, counting seven, and while holding the breath raise the right leg as high in the air as possible, keeping it up as long as the one deep breath will permit, and while dropping it back to the bed beside the other, exhale through the nose to count of six. Inhale again immediately, and while holding the breath lift the other leg, holding and exhaling as before. Repeat this exercise five times with each leg to start with, and increase daily as the strength grows.

Exercise No. 7. Lie face downward on the floor with feet and knees together, hands close together directly in front of the chest, palms down. Inhale deeply, drawing in the air to the fullest depth of the lungs, and while holding the breath, lift the right foot, full length from the floor, bend only by the hands and the knee. Now relax, and drop gently back to the floor, while exhaling through the mouth to count of six. Inhale again immediately, and lift again as before, without stopping even for a moment's rest. Repeat this exercise five or six times to start with and increase two counts daily, until the body may be lifted up four or five times in rapid succession, with apparent ease.

Exercise No. 8. Lie across the bed, or a strong couch, flat on the back. In this position creep (on the hands only) out across the floor until the line comes directly over the edge of the bed. At this point inhale through the nose, counting seven, and while holding the breath raise the right leg as high in the air as possible, keeping it up as long as the one deep breath will permit, and while dropping it back to the bed beside the other, exhale through the nose to count of six. Inhale again immediately, and while holding the breath lift the other leg, holding and exhaling as before. Repeat this exercise five times with each leg to start with, and increase daily as the strength grows.

Exercise No. 9. Lie face downward on the floor with feet and knees together, hands close together directly in front of the chest, palms down. Inhale deeply, drawing in the air to the fullest depth of the lungs, and while holding the breath, lift the right foot, full length from the floor, bend only by the hands and the knee. Now relax, and drop gently back to the floor, while exhaling through the mouth to count of six. Inhale again immediately, and lift again as before, without stopping even for a moment's rest. Repeat this exercise five or six times to start with and increase two counts daily, until the body may be lifted up four or five times in rapid succession, with apparent ease.

Exercise No. 10. Stand erect, as described in exercise No. 1, with arms resting flat on the floor, face resting on the hands, which are as close together. Now reach the right leg straight out to the fullest length, upward, as high in the air as possible, and hold it immediately and repeat the exercise five times. After resting a moment assume the same erect position, and this time instead of swinging the body to right and left as possible in each direction, keeping it rigid as above described.

ing seven, and while holding the breath lift the right leg up, backward, bending the leg at the knee, at the same time reaching back, with the right hand catching the toe and pulling it upward as far as the strength will permit. Now relax and drop it back to the floor, while exhaling through the mouth to the count of six. Inhale again immediately and lift with the opposite side, catching the toe, inhaling and exhaling as before, and pulling as hard and as high as possible.

Do this exercise at least five or six times, with each leg to start with, and increase daily until twenty-five lifts with each side can be made without puffing. For gaining absolute control of the body this will be found an splendid exercise.

At the conclusion of these exercises (if done exactly as herein described), the patient should be perspiring freely. She should be taken in a loose gown or pajamas and lie down on a bed for a large cupful of very hot water, after which let her step from the tub into a heavy blanket without drying off, and go immediately to her couch, where she is packed with heavy covers, for a further sweat of a half hour.

At the expiration of thirty minutes she returns to the tub of hot water again and rinses off, after which she is rubbed down with a Turkish towel, and her morning's exercise is finished.

PATTERNS FOR MAKING THE NEW EMBROIDERED COLLAR AND CUFF SET

Directions for Transferring the Design for the Collar and Cuffs on to Your Linen or Other Material

COLLAR

THE designs for the smart new embroidery collar and cuffs set presented herewith are printed in specially prepared ink, which will easily enable you to transfer the design to linen or other material which you wish to embroider. By this process you can make for yourself at home embroidery patterns for which you would have to pay from 15 to 25 cents in the stores.

First of all place the design, printed side up, on the table, ironing board or even a hard floor. The linen, large enough to cover the collar and two cuff patterns, should be slightly dampened and carefully laid over the design. Over the linen place a sheet of clean, damp paper, and then on top of that one or two big, heavy books. By adding your own weight to the pressure of the books for a few moments the pattern will be reproduced much more perfectly upon the cloth than otherwise.

One or two minutes of steady pressure is sufficient to obtain a perfect reproduction of the collar and cuff designs on your linen. For the rest you simply follow the patterns in embroidering the linen and making the collar and cuffs.

It has been suggested that a copying press, such as is used in every business office for copying letters, will enable you to obtain perfect reproductions of the embroidery designs. If your husband or sister or if you yourself are employed where a letter copying press is within reach the results may be found even more satisfactory than if you transfer the design to linen by book pressure at home.

You must take care in making your transfers not to have the linen too wet. It should be merely damp. A good way is to wet it, then wring it out, shake it and let it become almost dry again before placing it in contact with the transfer patterns.

"Bargain Day" Patterns and Directions for Ten Cents for This Two-Piece Fall Eton Suit, Which You Can Easily Make at Home Yourself

THIS is "bargain day" in the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner pattern series. The complete patterns and directions for making this pretty two-piece suit with Eton effect at home yourself are offered to-day for ten cents.

The jacket pattern, No. 193-3085, is being cut in four sizes—30, 34, 38 and 42 inches bust.

The skirt pattern, No. 193-3086, is being cut in six sizes—20, 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30 inches waist.

To obtain both of these patterns for ten cents, in any of the specified sizes desired, fill in the accompanying blank, giving name, post office address, bust and waist measure, and mail with ten cents in money or stamps to Eton Suit Patterns, P. O. Box 260, New York City.

The patterns ordered, together with complete directions showing just how to cut and make the two-piece suit at home yourself, will be forwarded to you postpaid by return of mail.

The two-piece suit still holds first place and justly so. Nothing is more suitable for general wear than a well-fitted skirt and jacket of some durable material. For special occasions a more dressy fabric, such as broadcloth, with the addition of a dainty lingerie waist, which, by the way, will be worn far into the winter, will leave nothing to be desired in the way of smartness. With the wear-and-tear suit of tweed, panama or cheviot a simple shirt waist of linen or madras is worn. The skirt is an unusual model with plaited sections inserted in the lower part, giving fullness where it is most desired. For the medium size 6½ yards of 44-inch material are necessary.
